TO RAISE CAMPAIGN FUNDS.

Chairman Chas. R. Tips of the 15th Congressional District Campaign Committee was here from Three Rivers Monday to confer with the County Democratic Executive Committee on matters pertaining to campaign expenses. Unfortunately, only three members, M. L. Dubose of Devine, John Zuberhauer of Dunlay and Wilfred Wernette of Castroville, together with the County Secretary and the Chairman could attend the conference.

Mr. Tips explained the plan for raising the funds substantially as follows:

Suggestions Respecting the Sale of Medallions.

In order that all Democrats may have an active part in the campaign, an organization known as "Shareholders in America" has been formed with membership in it based upon the purchase of a medallion bearing in profile the likenesses of our candidates, Franklin D. Roosevelt and John N. Garner. The medallion which was designed by the internationally famed sculptor, Gutzon Borglum, is sold to individuals at $1.00 each or what ever larger amount the purchaser desires to contribute. Each subscriber receives a certificate as evidence of his membership in "Shareholders in America". The name of the purchaser is forwarded to National headquarters at New York where it becomes a matter of permanent record.

15th District Quota.

A quota of $15,000.00 has been set for this Congressional District. As this is the home district of our Vice Presidential Nominee it is essential that we do our full part. A quota has been set for each County in the district.

Organization And Plan.

In order to complete this sale satisfactorily it is most important that the committees of not less than five active workers in each voting precinct be organized at once.

It is therefore requested that each County Chairman see immediately that an effective working committee is organized in every precinct in his County.

Suggested Method of Sales.

1st. Personal canvass by precinct committeemen and women in each county.

2nd. In cities and towns, special committees should be designated to canvass all business establishments and office buildings.

3rd. The co-operation of civic bodies such as Chamber of Commerce, Women's and Luncheon Clubs should be solicited.

4th. The assistance of county and other public officials should be requested.

5th. Committees of young women to undertake street sales on October 8th also are suggested.

In Conclusion.

The above plan in essence is strictly democratic. It provides, for the first time in the history of any political party in America, a simple workable method whereby a member of the party can play an active part in assuring national victory. The appeal of the Democratic Party has always been to the people and this plan will enable the great body of plain American citizens to express a direct vital interest in the party's welfare.

Important.

It is essential that the names and addresses of all purchasers of medallions (plainly written) shall be forwarded to District Headquarters for our records and also that they may be forwarded by us to State and National headquarters for record there. Remember also that District headquarters has been charged for every medallion furnished to your committee. Therefore, every medallion forwarded to you must be accounted for.

Organization Not Yet Effected.

Owing to the absence of so many of the committeemen, the inability of the Chairman to find a lady to work with the women's division, under direction of Miss Margie Neal, state chairman for the women workers, and the inability of any of those present at the conference to leave their business long enough to make an active canvass of the county, little was accomplished in the way of organization.

Medina County's quota is $650.00, and the County Chairman has been supplied with 651 medallions. At this writing he has sold just three of them. There are still 648 in his possession and his first remittance is to be made immediately after tomorrow. So if you want to help Medina County make a creditable showing in her contribution to the election of Roosevelt and Garner dig up at least a dollar and get as many as possible of your friends to do likewise as soon as possible, and get one of the buttons.

If not convenient to see the County Chairman personally write him sending your contribution, or hand to your precinct chairman, or some other trustworthy person who will do so, and ask that they transmit the funds as early as possible to the County Chairman.

Medina County should not fall short in her contribution for the great fight we are now in even if "Hoover prosperity" has just about sapped us all of the sinews of war.

WRITING UNDER THE HEAD DISAPPOINTED.

Writing under the head of "Disappointed" the esteemed Hondo Anvil Herald, last week, said (among other things) regarding the proposed highway:

The committee was disappointed in that the commission abruptly dismissed all consideration of the proposed highway from Hondo to New Braunfels by way of Bandera and Boerne and would give definite assurance of nothing further than an early preliminary survey of the stretch from Hondo to Devine.

"This should not have been unexpected—and to this paper was not—in view of the upset the assumption by the state of several hundred million of dollars of county and district road bonds, as a consequence of the recent act of the legislature to that effect, will give highway funds, if a court can be found that will sustain the constitutionality of an act which does by indirection what the constitution forbids the state to do directly and which the voters have defeated before by their ballots—issuance of state road bonds. You cannot expect to buy new roads with funds that have been diverted to the paying for old roads already built. Thus we see the "benefits" of Sterling's "taxpayer's relief" as it works out on the ground."

No where in the paper, so far as we could see, did the Anvil Herald tell its readers that Medina County's tax rate was reduced one-third, from $1.05 to 70c, because of this new law that seeks to lift at least $400,000 road bonds off the shoulders of Medina County tax payers; or that the Federal government has around $13,000,000 to send to Texas, for highway purposes, if the Sterling program can be carried out; or that the State has a constitutional right to take over these highways, built by the counties, before the state began building with federal aid these state highways; no body, so far as we know, expects to divert money yet to be collected to pay for this to the building of new roads. Editor Davis was on the Hondo committee and we refrain from shown by the News in the above, 6tc further discussing the matter at this time.—Devine News.

"No where in the paper" did you find a great deal more that could have been said for the reason that we were neither attempting to exhaust all the facts that might have been related to the subject or mention all of the opinions pro and con that might have been deduced therefrom.

We were merely seeking to put the most charitable face possible on the reason for our disappointment—that new roads cannot be built with money diverted from its original purpose of building new roads to that of paying off debts owing on roads already built—and to encourage the advocates of the proposed road to keep up their efforts to secure it.

If the News wants to co-operate in a constructive effort to keep awake the interest in the securing of this long needed highway it chooses a peculiar way of doing so by seeking to start an argument over extraneous matters—or matters not germane to the aim sought to be achieved, continued interest in the securing of the highway—which were not to be found, because we had not put them there, and deliberately omitting to observe our closing paragraph, containing the crux of the whole matter as we were discussing it:

"However, even if this measure stands up in court, new policies and possibly new legislation will effect the administration of highway affairs after the middle of next January, and the matter of a much-needed better road between Hondo and Devine, while needlessly delayed, is only delayed, unless its backers choose to let it go permanently to sleep."

We'll wager a doughnut against a Hoover-1928-prosperity promise that the News neither has the fairness to print the above paragraph in its complete original setting so its readers can judge it for themselves, nor decency to correct the errors in its statement of the facts it tried to drag into the discussion or the gratuitous inferences it tried to inculcate in the minds of its readers by its comments and omissions.

when co-operation is needed, has made this proposed highway between our towns a football of factionalism and delayed its proper construction for almost forty years. How much longer would the News keep up the dissension?

TO HANDLE GOVERNMENT RELIEF FUNDS.

At Tuesday's Luncheon Club meeting, Medina County's representative to the meeting of representatives from Southwest Texas Chambers of Commerce, Prof. W. N. Saathoff, reported results of the conference. The meeting was held in San Antonio last week to formulate plans for handling the government's unemployment relief work in the various counties of this section. The plan agreed upon is to have a central county committee and this committee to be assisted by local committees where needed.

After Mr. Saathoff's report, there was some discussion by members of the Club.

There was some doubt as to whether the work could best be rendered through the Commissioners court or a private agency, the former being proposed because of the suggestion that the funds used would either have to be paid back by the county or else it would be deducted from future allotments of State-Federal road funds apportioned to the county; and the Commissioners being custodians of the roads and the only agency empowered to obligate the county financially, it was deemed wisest and fairest to all to spend the money by giving the unemployed work on the roads under the direction of those responsible for their upkeep, the Commissioners Court.

A motion prevailed, however, to ask the Chamber of Commerce to take charge of the matter and thereby the Luncheon Club passed it out of its hands.

A meeting was called of the Directors of the Chamber of Commerce Tuesday night and a committee composed of J. M. Finger, Chairman, R. J. Noonan, H. E. Haass, P. Jungman and W. N. Saathoff was appointed to handle the matter. The Committee will work free of charge but may hire a secretary or manager, paying him from the funds secured, and will work with local community committees as the need may arise.

FREE ENTERTAINMENT.

The public is extended a cordial invitation to the musical program to be presented free of charge Monday night, October 17, at the High School Auditorium. HONDO OWLS MEET CARRIZO SPRINGS WILDCATS ON THE LOCAL GRIDIRON SATURDAY AT 3:30 P. M.

Fresh from their victory over a heavy and experienced Peacock team, the Owls have been priming this week for the game with the Carrizo Springs Wildcats. The Peacock game showed the coaches plenty of weaknesses in the Owls' attack, and those have been ironed out as much as possible. Defensively, the Owls looked excellent at times and sorry at times. The entire team played as a unit, and no individual was outstanding. The two touchdowns scored by the Owls were the results of sustained drives down the field, on being climaxed by a long pass for a touchdown.

Carrizo is coming to Hondo bent on avenging a 7 to 0 defeat suffered at the hands of the Owls last year. Hondo hopes to show the visitors what a real football field looks like, not to speak of the team. The Owls, most of whom played at Carrizo last year, have a score of their own to settle, and have not forgotten how they had to battle dust, heat, and bad luck, through that terrible last half at Carrizo. Captain Finger is expected to hit his stride Saturday in an effort to prove to Carrizo fans that it was not luck when he ran sixty yards for a touchdown against them last year. And August will have plenty of help. Probable starting line-ups:

WINS VALUABLE PRIZE.

J. G. Walters, salesman at the McElroy Motor Company, is being congratulated on winning a Victory-8 Ford Roadster given as a premium by the Ford Motor Company. This award was made last Monday at the Company's assembling plant in Houston. The awarding was attended by Messrs. Jones and Walters and Mr. Walters brought his prize home with him.

The state had been divided into districts for contest purposes and a series of prizes offered in each district for the salesmen who produced the largest volume of business in their respective districts during the month of August and the first half of September. Four prizes were offered in Mr. Walters' district, which was No. 3, and he won First.

That Mr. Walters is a hard-working and successful salesman and that financial conditions are not so bad by comparison in Hondo's trade territory is attested by the fact that he won first prize in a contest with other salesmen in 48 other Texas towns of about the size of Hondo.

Congratulations to you, Mr. Walters, and to the McElroy Motor Co.

LADY AND GENT.

"Lady and Gent" brings to the Colonial Theatre this Friday and Saturday the real, human George Bancroft. No More of the cocky mannerisms and swagger; in this place, a real fellow, a little punch-crazy, a has-been fighter who gets mixed up with people and events beyond his comprehension. Wynne Gibson shares honors with the real Bancroft.

The story is of a "hard man and his girl who dropped into a little town to stay for an hour and remained forever; of a wise-cracking queen of the night clubs and her boy friend". It is climaxed by a series of sequences that are whimsically sweet and vividly dramatic.

Others in the cast are Charles Starrett, James Gleason, and Joyce Compton.

Next week—Tom Mix and his wonder horse, Tony, in "My Pal the King."

Since June when volume deliveries of the new Ford V-8 cars began, Ford has led all competitors by a wide margin in sales of passenger cars, commercial vehicles and trucks, according to official figures reported today by Mr. Jones of McElroy Motor Co., local Ford dealers.

Ford took the lead in national motor car sales in June, increased his lead in July, as production of the new Fords mounted, and maintained the lead throughout August, according to reports for that month already received from 34 states, Mr. Jones declared. In addition to this, the latest reports also reveal that Ford led in sales in the largest cities during the first ten days of September.

In June, the first month when volume deliveries of the new Ford cars were available, Ford's share of total passenger car sales in the United States reached 35.9 per cent, as compared to 24.9 per cent for its nearest competitor. Ford commercial cars were 50.5 per cent of all such vehicles sold, as compared with 37.6 per cent for its nearest competitor, while Ford trucks represented 35.7 per cent of all Truck sales, as compared with 27.6 per cent for the nearest competitor.

Ford sales in July, as revealed by official registrations, mounted over June figures and Ford's share of the business was increased. Ford passenger car sales reached 38.4 per cent of the total business as compared with 34.2 for its nearest competitor. Ford commercial cars were 54.4 per cent of all cars sold, giving Ford a greater percentage of the total business than all other manufacturers combined. The Ford share of national truck sales was 34.4 per cent as compared with 27.1 per cent for its nearest competitor.

The reporting of registrations in August in the various states is not complete but on the basis of reports thus far received from 34 states, Ford sales again lead the field.

Since volume deliveries of the new Ford began in June, Ford has accounted for 40.8 per cent of all new passenger car sales in Texas as compared with 38.4 per cent for its nearest competitor, Mr. Jones added. Ford sold 5,158 of the total 12,642 cars of all makes sold in the State in June, July and August.

FIGHT THE FLY PEST.

By L. A. Hawkins

Agricultural Extension Department International Harvester Company.

Kill the wintered-over fly. A female fly killed in April or May will make nearly six trillions fewer flies in September. We cannot realize how many less flies that means.

The rapidity with which flies multiply is amazing. One wintered-over female fly on April 1st will, if unmolested, produce a progeny by September 10 of 5,598,720,000,000, according to the calculation of Dr. Howard, chief entomologist, at Washington, D. C. If every wintered-over fly were killed when it first appeared in the spring, the fly menace would soon be solved. To kill one fly early in the season is as effective as killing millions in midsummer.

Fly time is upon us. Already the wintered-over flies are making their appearance. They will soon be rapidly increasing. We must begin now to fight the fly. We must not let one escape if we can help it. Mankind has no more deadly enemy than the fly. They kill thousands of people every year. Most of the victims are little children. Typhoid fever, cholera, dysentery, summer complaint, tuberculosis and other intestinal diseases may be spread by germs carried by the fly.

It is better to prevent sickness than to wait until the disease has been contracted and then attempt to cure it. It is safer and easier to keep flies out of our homes by proper screening, by trapping flies and by destroying their breeding places, than to get them out when they once are in.

In exterminating the fly the first and most important step is to get rid of its breeding place. The manure pile is the most prolific source of the fly nuisance. In this they are born, on it they crawl as fully matured flies.

Flies Indicate Filth. Wherever you find flies you will find filth. The garbage can or swill barrel should be kept covered. A pail should be kept dry and clean and the stable whitewashed. Manure should never be left to stand in a pile. It leaches away; loses its value as fertilizer; provides breeding places for flies. Food should not be left exposed. Milk should be kept covered.

We should keep our premises clean. We should screen our homes and business buildings. We must destroy the breeding places of the fly, and we must starve him. We should organize against the fly, just as we would organize an invading army. The fly is a menace to the conservation of food; to the conservation of health; to the conservation of human life.

A special anti-fly campaign should be started in every community. Everyone, the old and young, the schools, the churches, the newspapers, the city officials, the merchants, the bankers and professional men should co-operate.

USE ORANGE AND LEMON PEEL.

You throw away many a delicious morsel when you cast your orange and lemon rinds aside. Grated rinds are used by the best cooks to flavor cakes, pies, breads, desserts, frostings, fillings, sauces and other foods.

In grating, only the yellow portion of the rind should be removed. This portion contains the oils that give the flavor. Grated peels may be used fresh or mixed with sugar and kept in a tightly covered jar. Where the whole peel is used it is ground fine, mixed with sugar, and used in the same manner as the grated rind.

REAL LAZY.

"The laziest woman in these parts," remarked Aunt Matilda, "is Lavinia Jones. She even puts popcorn in her pancakes so they'll turn over themselves."

Always dry wet leather slowly and at a temperature not too hot for the bare hand. Strange as it may seem, wet leather burns much more readily than dry leather. If a polish or shine is not desired, an application of oil to leather articles while they are damp makes them more soft and pliable when dry.

HONDO, TEXAS, OCT. 7, 1932

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

In addition to increasing our postal rates on mailing our papers about 25 per cent, the Hoover scheme for relieving the depression compels the post office to charge us two cents for every notice of change in address it delivers to us. You can send us a notice on a 1c postal card and not notice it, but a 2c charge on us will soon aggregate a burdensome sum to us, so we beg of you to not leave it to the post office to notify us of change of address but do so yourself as soon as a change is made. Postmasters are asked to send no notice until several undelivered papers are accumulated and then only one. Thanking you in advance, we are,

Yours truly, THE EDITORS.

QUIH NOTES.

He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much. Luke 16:10.

Small tasks are often difficult and menial; often despised as drudgery and a dead lift. They demand a good deal of self-denial and meekness. The average human being would rather be president than his butler; rather prince than Cinderella. But, after all, what is big, what is small in this world? The most expensive watch depends on the flimsy hair-spring; the greatest sovereign on the fidelity of his humblest servants. Faithfulness in your service earns the test of your actions. Try it in your immediate surroundings—the home. Much of modern domestic unhappiness has its source in the gross neglect of this nearest and dearest circle. There lies your chief responsibility. National and international issues depend upon that. Even where the Lord assigns more extensive, more complicated tasks, true faithfulness towards God and man make it imperative that your home receive primary consideration. Faithless there, faithless everywhere—how often does this apply?

English service will be conducted at Quih on the 9th of this month, at 10:30 A. M. Sunday school and Bible class at 9:30. Watch the changed time schedule that will remain in effect during the winter months. (Evening services, after this, will be at 7:30 P. M.) German service on the same Sunday at New Fountain, 2 P. M. A hearty invitation to all members and friends.

The Luther League Program will start at 8 P. M., same Sunday. Declarations will be delivered by Mrs. Arnold Lindeburg and Mr. Lewis Boehle; readings by Mrs. Geo. Saathoff and Miss Hulda Neumann; a double duet with a selection by Miss Margaret Reitzer; a male quartet with a selection by Mr. Oscar Grell; a piano duet by Mrs. Andrew Schweers and Miss Alma Grell. A male quartet, selection by Mr. Alfred Boehle, and the church choir plus some contemplated voluntary work will contribute towards a well-filled program. Time 8 P. M. You'll be there, of course. The Social has been set for October 19th, 7:45 P. M. The Messrs. Tim Schuenie, O. Lindeburg and Ant. Zell will present a German playlet, novelty for a change. The English singing-playlet, "The Glee Club of Hemmingsville," has the following singers: Messrs. Edwin, Anton, Walter, and Oscar Grell, R. Saathoff, Clarence Dailey, Alfred and Frank Boehle. These names warrant something worthwhile. Other features will supplement the pleasures of the evening, general and hearty invitation goes all.

The Pastor

What this country must have to save the masses from industrial slavery and save the country from financial revolution is an inflation currency so that interest and debts are not paid and foreclosures and bankruptcies can be stopped. There is not sweat and blood enough being put into the land to pay the interest with less lift the burden of debt with prevailing prices for the products. Will the powers that be open their eyes to this in time when they, like a blind Samson, pull down our whole economic and social structure upon their own heads?

Easy borrowing facilities are one of the man who can use capital to make it produce profits; it is a curse to the man who can not so use and serves only as a means of pulling to dissipate the little he has. Since there are many of the latter class than of the former, Hoover's scheme of relieving depression by increasing loans is a menace to more than it is a bene-

WURZBACH-HOFFMAN.

The marriage of Miss Lometa Hoffman, daughter of Mrs. Louise Hoffman of Seguin, and Mr. Theodore Wurzbach of Cliff, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Wurzbach, took place at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening at the Zion's Lutheran church at Castroville, with Rev. K. Konzack performing the ceremony.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion, the altar rail being banked in flowers and fern. Vases of roses and carnas decorated the altar and steps leading to the altar.

Mrs. K. Konzack played the "Bridal Chorus" from "Lohengrin" on the organ. The church choir rendered a pretty selection, "Lead Us, Heavenly Father". After the vows were given, Miss Renata Wurzbach and Mrs. C. C. Bippert sang "Where Thou Goest", accompanied by Mrs. K. Konzack on the organ. Mrs. K. Konzack played softly during the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Mr. Otto Hoese of San Antonio, was met at the altar by the groom and his best man. The bride was lovely in a heavy satin and lace gown, being fitted. The skirt was made to flare, forming a train in the rear. The veil was made in cap effect, beaded with seed pearls. The double veil of tulle and lace, which was caught by a cluster of orange blossoms at each side of the head, fell in graceful folds over the train. White satin slippers were worn, and a graceful bouquet of bride's roses and fern, showered with sweetheart roses, tied with a mauve bow, was carried.

The bride's attendants were Miss Tusnela Wurzbach, maid of honor, in pink satin, and Miss Norma Wurzbach, bridesmaid, in turquoise blue satin. Their gowns were made long in the princess effect, with the old-fashioned double puffed sleeve. Slippers were worn in contrasting colors. As a head-dress brilliants were worn. They carried arm bouquets of deep pink rosebuds and fern, tied with mauve bows.

Mr. Wurzbach was attended by his cousin, Arthur Wurzbach, as best man, and groomsmen was Walter Wurzbach, also a cousin of the groom.

Following the ceremony at church, a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Wurzbach.

Summer flowers were used to decorate throughout the rooms. The wedding cake centered the U-shaped table.

The bride chose for traveling a black spiral weave jacket suit, trimmed in the white spiral weave, with which she wore black accessories.

Mr. Wurzbach and his bride motored to Corpus for a few days. They will be at home to their friends after the 1st of October.

RATE INCREASE OPPOSED.

Officials of the Three Rivers Glass Company are making plans to oppose with all the resources in their power the increase proposed by the railroads in the freight rate on glass bottles in carload lots from Three Rivers to El Paso, Texas, from the present rate of 65c to 87c per 100 lbs. This is an increase of 22c per 100 lbs. or approximately 35 1-3%.

The case is set for hearing before the Texas-Louisiana Traffic Bureau at Dallas, Texas, at their meeting on September 6, 1932.

In commenting on this proposed increase, Charles R. Tips, president of Three Rivers Glass Company, stated that the development of industry in Texas is seriously handicapped by the excessive freight rates prevailing in this territory. Rates per ton-mile are very much higher in this section than in the north east and there is a considerably larger part of every dollar received that goes for freight charges.

This discrimination against industries in the southwest applies on in-coming material as well as out-going production.

This situation applies not only to the glass industry but to other products produced in Texas and it has especially handicapped the development of the food packing industry in the great Winter Garden and the Rio Grande Valley sections of Texas, according to Mr. Tips.

These fertile regions produce annually thousands of carloads of fruit and vegetables and could produce thousands of additional carload lots year after year. Only a relatively small portion of the potential crop can be shipped because the market prices annually go down to a point where the freight charges are more than the products will bring.

The farmers at Three Rivers shipped a carload of cucumbers this past season to St. Louis and were presented with a bill for the difference between what their product brought on the market and the freight charges, leaving nothing at all for their product and their labor and the same thing happens every year with carload lots of watermelons and other South Texas products.

If the canning industry could be developed on a large scale as it has been developed in California, agricultural production could be stabilized to a great degree in this region. Although canning plants cannot pay the fancy prices that are paid for the early carload lots on the fresh market, they would pay a reasonable price throughout the season, giving a reasonable return on the investment. It is this canning development that has largely helped to stabilize agriculture and land values in California.

On account of deep water ports at both Los Angeles and San Francisco, products from California reach the principal consuming market of the United States much more cheaply than is possible at present from a large part of Texas.

The people of this region can begin to prosper if they will unite in a program of development. Mr. Tips said, including the building of a deep water port to serve the Rio Grande Valley, the extension of the intercoastal canal to that region and the development on a large scale of the food packing industry. The Corpus Christi port now helps the Winter Garden district and the Nueces Valley territory and as transportation facilities are developed its beneficial effects will be more apparent. The necessity for water transportation is shown, Mr. Tips said, by the fact that the freight rate from Three Rivers to St. Louis and Kansas City is less than the rate to Dallas on carload lot shipments although products destined for Kansas City or St. Louis pass through Dallas en route. The low rate to Kansas City being due to the fact that bottles can be shipped to Corpus Christi and from there by boat up the Mississippi River.

As an encouragement to the development of food packing in Texas the Three Rivers Glass Company has established the policy of selling at the same prices in the Southwest that apply in the Northeastern territory but it is very difficult to maintain this policy in face of increased transportation costs and therefore in fighting against this constantly increasing charge, the battle is fought not only for the glass industry but for all producers of food products as well, Mr. Tips said.

J. M. Cunningham.

SOME STRIKING FACTS.

Of the Texas tax dollar only 1 1-2 cents goes to all forms of agricultural education, research and administration. It was brought out in a tax survey report by a committee of the Texas Agricultural Workers' Association made public during the Short Course at Texas A. and M. College recently. All experimental work, higher learning, extension work, vocational agriculture work, forestry work, and the work of the State Department of Agriculture are paid for out of this 1 1-2c of the tax dollar.

The reports also showed that farmers carry too large a share of the tax burden in Texas. In a study of about 4000 probate will cases in Dallas county by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station it was found that intangible property such as notes, stocks, bonds, cash and book accounts, represented 52 1-2% of total values yet paid only 3.7% of direct taxes. There is also a tendency, the report revealed, for large properties, including large farms, to be more lightly assessed than smaller properties.

Tenantry in Texas is greatest in the blacklands, in Northwest Texas and in the East Texas piney woods, with the heaviest increase in the last decade appearing in the cotton-grain sorghum territory of Northwest Texas, it was pointed out in the report of the committee on land tenure. L. P. Gabbard of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station explained that the largest increases in tenancy from 1880 to 1930 when the percentage of tenant farms increased from 58% to 61%, occurred in the two decades 1890-1900 and 1920-1930. In the latter period, however, the increase was largely due to an increase in croppers rather than third and fourth tenants.

Suggestion for improvement in land owner-tenant relations included better forms of leases; compensation to tenants for unexhausted improvements; and the selling of land to worthy tenants on a long time payment plan in which a share of the crops retires the notes.

Messrs. C. H. Emerson, V. H. Widener and B. P. Belknap, oil operators, were here Monday from San Antonio conferring with Mr. Ryal over plans for developing the latter's leases southeast of town. The Anvil Herald hopes to soon have interesting news of developments in this promising field.

Rev. T. J. Flynn arrived home one day last week from Ireland where he spent the summer months with his family, and has resumed his duties in St. John's Parish. Father Flynn attended the Eucharistic Congress at Dublin while in Ireland, and is enthusiastic in his praises of the immense gathering of Catholic people from the world over. As has been his custom for many years, Judge A. M. Lamm was the first to pay his taxes Saturday when the date for paying 1932 taxes arrived. Judge Lamm's custom is different from most of us who put off the task until the last moment—and judging from the delinquent tax lists in many places, some indefinitely.

County Court held a brief session at the courthouse Monday, it being the opening day of the October term. Only a few matters, mostly routine, engaged the attention of the court, and it recessed subject to call. There are four terms of the County Court a year and each term is open for three months, and recesses from time to time when the business is completed.

Herbert Decker, who is canvassing for the office of County Clerk, had a narrow escape Tuesday afternoon near the Dunlay school house. As he drove into the Highway, out of the school house lane, a car occupied by four young people came over the hill east and struck Mr. Decker's car. Both cars were damaged, but luckily all parties escaped with only minor injuries.

Our veteran friend who has been with us ever since our ambitious entrance into journalism back in Castroville more than 32 years ago, August Hornung, called on us last Friday and moved up the subscriptions to his three papers, going to San Antonio, New York state and Colorado, to his widely separated daughters. If we can make this paper seem to them like a letter from their dad back at the old home town, then we shall have attained our ideal of what a small town editor is at his best.

Remove the Cause of Rheumatism

Excess Uric Acid poison—the cause of most rheumatic agony starts to leave your body in 24 hours.

Think of it—how this old world does make progress—now comes a prescription which is known to pharmacists as Allenru and within 48 hours after you start to take this swift acting formula pain, agony and inflammation has departed.

Truly a day for the whole family to celebrate for instead of being a helpless, expensive and annoying cripple the happy person is soon at work again.

Allenru does just what this notice says it will do—it is guaranteed by W. H. Windrow's, the Nyal Store, and leading druggists to do it—you can get one generous bottle for 85 cents and if it doesn't bring the joyous results you expect—your money whole heartedly returned.

Take heart—lively activity comes again after the wonderful benefit Allenru brings has made you cheerful and happy.

And remember this, Allenru is just as effective for neuritis, sciatica and lumbago.

"Are There Men There?"
Polynesian Christian was about to start on mission work in New Guinea.
One of his native friends said:
"Do not go. There are alligators there, and snakes, and centipedes."
"Hold," said Tepeso, "are there men there?"
"Oh, yes, of course; but they are such dreadful savages that it is no thinking of living among them."
"That will do," said Tepeso.
"Wherever there are men, missionaries are bound to go."

In the first 20 years of the mission hundred and twenty of these Poly-nesian teachers died of fever, were poisoned or killed; but for every one that died many others offered themselves to go and talk about Jesus. To day Jesus makes even the heathen brave and willing to give up their comforts of life to help other people know and love Him. What are you doing up for Him?—Selected.

BAPTIST NEWS NOTES.

Some forty-eight Baptist churches, associated together in what is known as the "San Antonio District Association", is holding its annual business sessions in San Antonio this week. In these churches are some twelve thousand communicants or members. Attending these meetings from the Hondo Baptist church have been the following persons: Mrs. Marvin Beal, Mrs. H. H. Crow, W. T. Crow, H. H.
Crow, Mrs. W. T. Crow, Mrs. R. W.
Merrill and the Pastor. The purpose of these annual gatherings are to make reports of the year's work and to disseminate information concerning the institutions of the denomination; also to inspire a wider and more enthusiastic effort in furthering the missionary work of our people. Our Savior said, on leaving the world: "Go ye therefore and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and the Son and the Holy Spirit; teaching them to observe all things which I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world".

The services at the Baptist church on next Sunday will be held as usual.
The Bible school at ten o'clock, to which you are cordially invited. Do not hesitate; you will receive a most cordial welcome. Do not ignore the call and invitation of Christ, whom we all need, and without whom, man's hopes must all be blasted forever.
The Lord's Supper will be celebrated following the eleven o'clock message.
The full membership should be present to re-consecrate themselves to our blessed Savior.

The evening service will begin at 7:30 o'clock. It will be an inspiring hour for all who may attend. You better come.

How One Woman Lost 10 Lbs. in a Week

Mrs. Betty Luedeke of Dayton writes: "I am using Kruschen to reduce weight—I lost 10 pounds in one week and cannot say too much to recommend it."

To take off fat easily, SAFELY and HARMLESSLY—take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast, go lighter on fatty meats, potatoes, butter, cream and pastries
—it is the safe way to lose unsightly fat and one bottle that lasts 4 weeks costs but a trifle. Get it at W. H. Windrow's or any drugstore in America.
Mail orders filled. If this first bottle fails to convince you this is the safest way to lose fat—money back.

But be sure and get Kruschen Salts —imitations are numerous and you must safeguard your health.

EDITORIALS

* * * * *

Oh, goodbye to you, Mr. Secretary Hurley;

You may be an Irishman both braw and burly,

But you tangled yourself up in a lie

And 'tis better now you get up and hie,

For, Mr. Hurley, you are surely going early!

* * * * *

Whatever influence Secretary Hurley of the War Department might have exerted over the ex-service men in his effort to win their votes for Hoover was completely upset when he was caught emphatically denying in a speech that the shacks of the bonus marchers in Washington were fired by soldiers while the officer in command was at the same time stating that they were fired by his soldiers on orders from higher ups. We submit that Mr. Hoover should have his spokesmen better drilled—to the end that no matter who has to lie all may lie alike!

To Farming's readers beyond the confines of the state, and those closer home who do not know it, the editor wishes to say that he has been a constituent of Congressman John N. Garner ever since that gentleman has been in Congress. He speaks of his personal knowledge when he says that he is a Democrat sound in principles and a man proven worthy of acceptance. If advanced to the position of Vice President he will bring both faithful service and honor to his country. You can vote for him on our word that you will be rendering your country worthy service.

In all discussion of the proposal to pay the soldiers' bonus, it must be borne in mind that the only way to do it is to pay it with legal tender treasury notes. To borrow the money is to still further enslave the taxpayer to the interest gatherer and should not be thought of. When organized wealth can stave off the demand no longer, its scheme will be to call for another bond issue that they may invest their money in non-taxable wealth, in the shape of bonds, and reap a fresh harvest of interest from an over-burdened tax-paying public. Greenbacks freed the black slaves; they will free industrial slaves as well if given the chance.

Elsewhere on this page is a bit torn from history's pages that comes like the voice of a leader calling to the lost wanderers in the politico-economic wilderness of the present time. Greenbacks—the tangible pledge of the government's credit to the achievement of the task at hand—saved this union of states in its darkest hour of civil strife. Our Southern lineage precludes our ever being a hero worshipper of Lincoln, but oh for a lover of his country like Lincoln now instead of a British-Gold-Standard-loving Hoover in the place of the mighty. Nothing can lift from our backs the crushing burden of excessive taxes and interest except more and cheaper money; none better ever existed than the greenbacks; never a better chance to distribute and at the same time discharge a debt the government has already acknowledged to its defenders than by paying them out in settlement of the soldiers' bonus. And Hoover, minion of the international bankers, would not!

BE CAREFUL HOW YOU TAMPER WITH OUR CONSTITUTION.

Our basic social covenant is our Constitution; it should not be lightly tampered with, nor should it be changed except to meet an absolute need.

Yet changing our state constitution has become a favorite sport for our legislature.

No less than nine proposed Constitutional Amendments have been submitted for the people of Texas to vote on at the November 8th election.

In the furore and fury of party politics they are likely to be overlooked by most voters and adopted by a small active minority with some selfish end to achieve.

They ought to be every one defeated; not because they are all wholly without merit but because if not vicious they are not needed.

For instance, there is that popular favorite that will no doubt carry—and eventually disappoint those expecting relief from it—which proposes to exempt homesteads up to the $3,000.00 valuation from state ad valorem taxes.

It should be defeated and a new one submitted exempting the homestead from all taxation and providing a specific reduction of state expenses to cover the amount of tax money thus dispensed with.

Church and eleemosynary property enjoys such exemption and the home should come before either because it is the basis of organized society and upon it both the others depend.

It should be defeated in its present form for there is no provision to reduce state expenses to the amount of the tax the state will lose from that source; it will have to be secured from some new source of revenue and in the end the people will bear the same tax burden.

It should be defeated because any little tax levying unit, such as school or improvement districts, on the plea that such exemption has enhanced the value of the property, can and, in many instances, will more than offset the saving on state ad valorem taxes by raising the assessment of the property for local purposes.

Another "economy measure" is the proposal to consolidate the office of Tax Collector and Tax Assessor.

This may result in some measure of economy in a few small counties; we take it, however, that Medina County, where Farming has its domicile, is an average county, and here it would not mean economy; in counties larger it would necessarily be no more so.

In this county, both the Assessor and the Collector have a clerk practically all if not all the time with extra help in rush times.

If consolidated the official in charge must hire three deputies instead of now each official one and there would be no saving in cost to the taxpayer for service rendered; while the people would choose only one servant instead of two and multiply his political power three times by giving him the appointment of three political friends instead of only one.

This measure has neither economy nor good Democracy to recommend it.

And here is where we kiss goodbye to whatever chance The Fletcher Davis Publications might have had, if any, of sharing in the fees paid by somebody for running an attractive series of fat advertisements advising the people to vote permission to the Legislature to finance at the state's expense a Centennial Exhibition in Texas in 1936.

There are two appealing arguments in favor of this proposal which will probably carry it—pride in the state's past achievements and the more selfish plea that out-of-state patrons of the show will spend more money in Texas than it will cost the taxpayers.

From a utilitarian standpoint and waving aside the propriety of the state going into the show business—underwritten by the taxpayers—this would be good business—provided the profits were as universally distributed among the underwriting taxpayers as the tax will be.

To suggest that they will be is to evoke the modern radio Munchausen's favorite exclamation—

"Oh, Scharley!"

We yield to no man greater admiration for the glorious history, the marvelous resources and the boundless possibilities of our state's future, but we submit that the greatest exhibition she could show a tax-burdened world at this time would be a commonwealth where no spectre of tax foreclosure disturbed the peace of her citizens.

This can not be achieved by piling on more taxes for new purposes or taking those already wrung from people too poor to see the show they would be taxed to pay for, to say nothing about the dangerous precedent it would set to plead the cause of every whistling post which in the future may demand state aid for putting on a community fair.

"There are just two things to this government as I see it. The first is to safeguard the lives and properties of our people; the second to insure that each of us has a chance to work out his destiny according to his talents. This involves protecting him from being injured or oppressed by those of superior acquisitiveness, and perhaps less conscience, who seek to strain the rules to their own advantage."

—JOHN N. GARNER.

* * * * *

In Farming's judgment the people will be wise to tell a meddling legislature to cease trifling with our fundamental law by voting down all nine of their needless proposals at the November election.

After reading his first bellow we are convinced that Craeger's BULLington is well and properly named! After repeatedly disclaiming any intention of seeking the governorship on anything save his own merits, he reverts back to the training of his teachers and bleats a song of Ferguson-hate. You are all bull, Mr. Bullington.

The special session of the recently adjourned Texas Legislature passed a measure designed to allocate from the gasoline tax sufficient funds to pay the interest and provide the sinking fund for taking up certain county Highway bonds. Counties relieved by the state of this burden have in many instances, reduced road taxes, but already said citizens are finding that because of this diversion of funds the state must curtail its road construction work or levy additional gasoline tax. Beware of tax-shifters who come offering you tax relief without telling you what government expense they are going to abolish. Verily relief can come only by abolishing the need.

The counsels of party leaders to the contrary notwithstanding, the malicious effort to steal the governorship from Mrs. Ferguson up at Austin is a menace to the entire Democratic ticket from top to bottom in Texas. Any one who knows the first rudiments of politics knows that retaliation is the simplest and most natural step when resentment has been aroused and vindictiveness begins to assert itself. And it works in reverse gear as well as forward and is as dangerous to one side as the other. But the danger to the party is nothing in comparison to the menace there is to the state in the possibility of a Tom Love-Craeger combination getting control of the state's machinery.

Elsewhere, like a voice from out of the past, we publish an article from the pen of its first President, Dr. W. C. Macune, discussing the old Farmers Alliance. This great movement of organized farmers was wrecked on the shoals of party politics in the early nineties, and the basic purpose for which it contended—a revision of our money system in the interest of the masses instead of, as then and still is, in the interest of the favored classes—is still unachieved. In the history of that great movement, as only Dr. Macune can tell it, are many much needed lessons for our present day and we are sure our readers will welcome any further discussions of the same which may emanate from his able pen.

ORIGIN OF GREENBACKS.

In December, 1864, President Lincoln wrote the following letter to his old friend, Colonel Edmund Taylor, of Chicago:

My dear Colonel Dick:

I have long determined to make public the origin of the greenback and tell the world that it is one of Dick Taylor's creations. You have always been friendly to me and when troublous times fell upon us and my shoulders, though broad and willing, were weak and myself surrounded by such circumstances and people that I knew not whom to trust; then I said in my extremity, "I will send for Col. Taylor, he will know what to do."

I think it was in January, 1861, on or about the 16th, that I did so. You came and I said to you, "What can we do?" You said, "Why, issue treasury notes, bearing no interest, and printed on the best banking paper. Issue enough to pay off the army expenses and declare it legal tender."

Chase thought it a hazardous thing, but we finally accomplished it and gave to the people of this republic the greatest blessing they ever had—their own paper to pay their own debts.

It is due to you, the father of the present greenback, that the people should know it, and I take great pleasure in making it known.

Yours truly,
A. LINCOLN, President.

IN AUTUMN FIELDS.

By Fletcher Davis.

Autumn fields
Are drear and gloomy things
Where chilling winds
In the abandoned stubble
Sad dirges play
O'er departed harvest glories;
And the falling rain
Adds its tears
To the sodden waste
Left from the garnered grain.

Then,
Like the wise
Who bury in forgetfulness
The memory of ungarnished joys,
Comes the plowman;
He turns the soil,
Burying the waste of departed harvest days,
And a freshened earth
Smiles again
In new-born hope!

Soon the new-sown grain
Shall paint in living green
The far-spread canvas
Of the upturned fields,
Turning drab despair
Into living pictures of growing promise!

Plowman—magician and artist—
Behold the beauty you have wrought
And the lessons you have taught
In Autumn fields.

TO YOU—UP THERE.

By Ethel Osborn Hill.

I have not ceased my singing, dear,
Since you're away;
Nor has my heart forgotten, love,
Sweet tunes to play.

My eyes still have the love-light, dear,
You used to praise;
Because my heart holds memories
Of happier days.

I laugh—and hope you hear me, dear,
Away up there;
To be less brave than you have taught me, love,
I would not dare.

GOOBER PEAS.

By Claybron W. Merriweather.

Author of "Lights and Shadows",
"The Voice of Beauty", "The Pleasures of Life", etc.

The description and analysis of Negro life, by an able and discerning member of this race, is always an event of absorbing interest, for their literary work partakes of the joyous outlook that is the most admirable characteristic of this people.

Bishop Charles H. Phillips, writes an appreciative Introduction to Mr.
Merriweather's book, in which he says:

"Goobar Peas, the title of the book,
is suggestive as well as significant.
The author explains, in his own words, how he fell upon this name: 'taking a cue from a common plant peculiar to southern soil, the peanut, from which more than one hundred varieties of products have been made, I have given the book the name, Goobar Peas'.
I find unqualified pleasure in writing this Introduction to Goobar Peas, by my friend, Claybron W. Merriweather, and trust that it may attain a wide and popularity exceeding that of his previous publications.

"Mr. Merriweather tells the story of the poor illiterate, sometimes called the 'old time Negro', in dialect philosophy of life have been able to conquer conditions that might have

SILKEN DRAGON.

By James Neill Northe.

The silken dragon of the scented night
Is coiling round the ancient golden gate
Through which the customs old and gray, berate
The other races for their cool delight
And wilful oversight of custom's flight;
No farther from their thoughts, than that of bait
For foreign visitors to watch and wait
To satisfy their minds so by their sight.

The age-old customs now are indecay
Because of other races' attitude
Of mock solemnity, at sight of curled
Lithe silken dragon's coils, at rest or play.
Their minds and eyes thus turned and trained exclude
The fact—the silken dragon roams the world.

SUMMER IS WANING.

The summer is waning,
There's frost in the air,
The vines are all drooping
Quite leafless and bare.

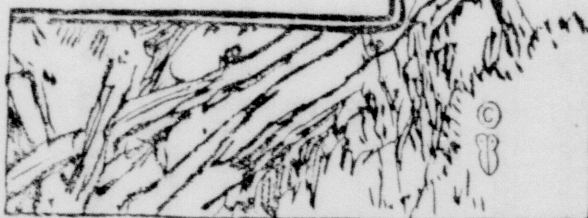

A gay little flower
Still clings to the stem,
Its wee, velvet petals
As bright as a gem.

Soon frost with chill fingers
Will touch its small face,
And though it still lingers—
'Tis robbed of its grace.

The cold winds are testing
Their strength on the trees—
With moan and with queesting
They race the broad leas.

The bins are all filling
With harvested grain,
And cloudland is spilling
God's cool, autumn rain.

AS YOU GO.

By Elizabeth Giles Winn

As you go,
I shall miss you more
Than you'll ever know;
And the world will seem as bleak
As the drifting snow.
The birds will cease their songs, too,
And the flowers will seem mute,
In their expression of you,
As you go.

As you go,
Though broken now, I'm left,
This much I know:
Truly, sweetly, you'll repose
In the whole of my soul.
Though only a shrine of memories
You'll leave me to hold,
Never to be forgotten,
As you go.

BIRD IN THE RAIN.

By Louis Miller Andrews.

Micro-flute of cosmic make,
Little songster in the lea,
Swaying in the old oak tree,
Thrills its song across the lake:
"Cheer up! Cheer up! see—
The sun is breaking free!"
Even rocks and roughage make Echoes: but will humans take Secrets, from your wordless glee
Slowly wording strange refrain
From their ecstasy and pain, Joyous, glad some-as-can-be Little singer in the rain?

FRIENDSHIP.

By Olive Scott Stainsby.

(Cinquain).

Rainbows
That span the sky
Lure me into vast dreams.
I dream of riches, love and fame
For you.

BEES

A bee flies down the valley
Where the timid violets grow,
And the perfume of wild flowers
fills the air;
My soul goes down the alley
Where distress may never know That it's life may ever be without a care.

The one is seeking roses,
And the nectar to be found In the bosom and the beauty of a flower;
The other carries posies
To the cheerless on its round,
That distress may be lessened
every hour.

It's the promptness of the bee,
And the love-life of the soul,
With the duty and the mercy they convey;
From the rose, the nectar free,
And with love combine the whole,
And the soul has found and kept the better way.

Let your life be busy too,
And as busy as the bee,
In gathering and in helping those in need;
For it's always what you do,
As your duty you may see,
That's the measure and the value of your deed.

teaching a lesson that will inspire and make for betterment."

It is of interest to know that the Goobar pea, or peanut, is a low plant, with blossoms resembling the sweet pea; that the stems containing the blossoms peg downward into the earth, the earth-covered pegs developing the pods in which the nuts grow.
The author feels that the Goobar pea is symbolical of the Negro. He recalls that "It is the stream that is obstructed that has a song, and the light that is obstructed that produces the most beautiful colors"; and says:
"I have, therefore, felt that nothing more nearly typified his lowly beginning, development and value, interesting and entertaining as it is, than the goobar pea. His loves, sorrows, and superstitions, piety, amusements and virtues are all his own."

Since his arrival at Jamestown, the Negro as a group in America, is primarily a product of southern soil, is a part of its people, knows its sentiments and traditions. Laughing and singing and praying, loyal and a tireless worker, he surmounted conditions which might have meant extinction for others. Readily adaptable to any clime or calling or condition, original in his primitive thoughts and expressions, he has, like the little pea, become a wonder.

The author's happy faculty of putting into verse the happy philosophy of his people, is especially well done in this fine collection. His previous works have shown his love of good literature, as well as his ability to write it, and give to the world in this way the result, in books that have an emotional as well as artistic appeal.
Throughout the work is shown the author's philosophy, which he has stated in these words: "To appreciate the beautiful in Nature and life is to be happy,"—a really great truth, that all people might well accept with profit.

As is true of most educated Negroes, however, the author is better when he stays with "book" English and does not try to imitate the plantation 'darker' dialect. Few members of his race can do that and most of their efforts become stilted and devoid of that simple naturalness which is the very soul of its appeal.

We give here a sample of the author's better work and advise him to stick to that character of composition.

IT ALWAYS HAPPENS.

By Lola Bengé Clower.

Mothers should realize that children are not automatons to carry out their plans for them.

Lucille sat wondering—why had she let herself in for so much worry? She knew he was not sincere—knew she played with debutantes and chose to get cheap Cuban honey he fed them without first mixing with 50% water and boiling same for at least 30 minutes. That was too much work. She fed that honey of unknown source, and when spring came had to burn up 170 colonies on account of bee diseases brought in with that Cuban honey. There being some 20,000 pounds of comb honey already on the place that had to be burned too. Yet a week he had to burn 31 more colonies to get rid of said bee diseases which could have been prevented entirely by the feeding of granulated sugar, dissolved in water, to the consistency of syrup, or by the thorough boiling of the honey feed—before giving same to the bees.

A Snow and Baker alliance would mean everything to both families. The former's money would be all that was necessary for the latter's family to flourish as abundantly as the proverbial green bay.

How would she cope with her present love predicament? Here she was, a far-off Texas, and her mother and father-in-law in New York. Cottonwood was her own. She loved it because of her memories of days upon days spent in the saddle with her dear old dad at her side. The thought of leaving it again was unbearable. If only she could feel the happiness and content that she once had known. Could she endure her parents' stinging reproaches which were sure to be heaped out if she again thwarted their ambitious plans for her future? Or, was she such a coward that she would continue to allow her mother to shape her life? Why not? It was the easier way!

Her train of thought was abruptly broken by the maid's, "Miss Lucy, there's an artist outside who says he's found some scenes on the ranch which he wants to paint, with your permission, and he wants to know if he can't board here a few weeks while he is doing it."

"But—we can't—I don't—Oh, well, I suppose it would break the monotony. Prepare the west wing for him." "All right, honey; I'll tell him you said he could stay. Maybe he'll be company for you." Betty said, as she stuffed another pillow under Lucille's head. "Is that all, Miss Lucy?"

"Yes, Betty." As the door closed Lucille thought—what a treasure Betty was. She could never have managed without her, for she was not only maid and housekeeper but also friend and confidante. She was the only one who understood her latest dilemma.

Her thought turned to the artist, who was probably established in the house by now. Why had she let this artist stay—she had no desire to play the part of a hospitable hostess. But there was ample time to make her decision—two months to call her own—so it really did not matter how she spent it.

"Phone, Miss Lucy," called Betty from the hall. "Who can it be?" she muttered as she started downstairs. "Yes, Jack, this is Lucille. What is it?—The southwest section of the place, you say? How did that happen? Well—do what you think best. How's Jane? Tell her I've been expecting her over the last few days—Oh, I'm sorry—but who could help feeling wretched with this horrid wind and sand. No, I'm not so lonesome. Betty and I have acquired a real, honest-to-goodness artist. All right, then, Jack—Bye."

Good old Jack—what would have become of the ranch if he hadn't come by? Dad had always said that he was the best foreman in Texas. The sand was still raging as it has a habit of doing in early spring. Betty begged to have a gallop on Big Enough, her favorite pony, before dinner. But it was out of the question; she would be blinded before reaching the corral.

Betty knocked. Opening the door, she asked: "Miss Lucy, shall we have dinner at the time we've been having?"

"Yes, Betty, tell our artist dinner will be served at six." Two hours later when Bob Livingston walked into the dining room, Lucille's interest was aroused immediately. This was due partly to the unusual combination of classical features with an athlete's physique; partly to his distinctive bearing and poise. The meal was a pleasant one. Bob Livingston seemed at ease from the first moment and proved quite charming. Lucille discovered that painting was only a hobby. He was a Senior at the University and a football player. In the fall he had been injured in the last game of the season. After he had spent three months in the hospital, his doctor had ordered a year of roughing it—in the "wide open spaces." So he had taken this opportunity to develop his talent for painting.

As the weeks passed, Bob's physical condition improved steadily, and Lucille almost forgot her former life and its problems. Returning from a ride one afternoon, they stopped at a spring for a drink. As Bob helped Lucille from her horse, the emotions he had heretofore successfully downplayed, were too much for him. "Lucille, you've kept silent any longer. You've engaged me to that you are practically telling me that you love me more than anything in the world. I've stayed here, for I couldn't bear to leave, knowing you are going back to that man. Please say that you love me—just tell me."

Lucille gasped with the suddenness of it. For several minutes—which seemed an eternity to Bob—she sat quite still. Billy—her mother—the plans for her—all flashed through her mind. Then, happiness and peace welled up in her heart as she realized that Bob's love was all that mattered.

"Bob, dear, I do love you—I never knew what love was until this minute."

Bob's arms encircled her as he heaved a great sigh of relief.

While they rode home, they planned the future. Bob, who had learned to love the free, open life of the range, was as eager to make the ranch their home as Lucille. They decided to remodel the ranch house, irrigate and restock. They could hardly wait to tell Betty the news.

Next day the Joneses and Betty accompanied the delightfully happy pair into the nearby village where a justice of the peace performed the ceremony. The town did not afford a minister.

Thirty minutes later two telegrams were sent from the little West Texas town: one to Dr. and Mrs. Livingston in Chicago, the other to Mr. and Mrs. Snow in New York. In the Chicago home the wire was read with joyful amazement; in the New York home it was received with tears and consternation.

Several years later Lucille sat on the veranda watching Mary Jane and Bobby playing. She was thinking about their future. Naturally she had the ambition that mothers always have had—and probably always will have for their children. She hoped they would be carried out. Then she smiled whimsically, for she recalled her mother's plans for her. With a sigh, she realized the truth of the adage—"One's children usually do the unexpected."

J. BULL & CO.'S GREATEST RIVAL.

Com. J. M. Kenworthy, a member of the British Parliament, has written a book, "Peace or War," which candidly discusses the prospects of an early war between England and the United States. The book appears simultaneously with the Chicago investigation of the public school histories, ordered by Mayor Thompson with a view to purging such books of their British propaganda.

Kenworthy foresees England "at the head of a European federation of distrust against America," with Japan allied with England and Canada neutral. And he cites as factors in the situation; jealousy of America's financial leadership, bitterness of the British people over payment of the American war debt, and mounting commercial rivalry.

The Old Game. All these, with the exception of the war debt, make up the old bill of complaint which caused England to make war on Spain, Holland, France and Germany.

We need not be too much concerned with Commander Kenworthy's gloomy prophecy in order to arrive at the same conclusion based upon England's diplomatic history since Queen Elizabeth.

The blind idiots who thought they were bringing on world peace by pulling the chestnuts out of the fire for England in the World War and are now fondly dreaming of entering into the Britannic Union, might read the Kenworthy book with profit and undergo a sobering experience as a result.

But that is not to be expected of them, nor of those hilarious jingoes who, though they pretended to tremble in their boots because Germany might invade our country, now scout the idea of an invasion by any country on the face of the earth, by Jingo!

War By Blockade.

They are right, of course, in their latter conclusion. Invasion is the remote consistency of a miracle. But that is not the way future war with us will be conducted to reduce us to submission. England will simply establish a blockade 1,500 or 2,000 miles from our shores, and when we reflect that we have to import forty-four different ingredients to make steel, and that steel is essential to the successful conduct of war, they may ponder what other ingredients we have to import to keep our fleet in the Atlantic and Pacific at the same time—the fleet which we so mercilessly crippled to please England and the two halves of which would then have to face the intact navies of Great Britain and Japan acting in unison.

How far are we likely to go in our insane reliance on specious professions of international amity under the leadership of fanatical one-hundred-percenters at home and less-than-half-percenters abroad? We have scrapped a large section of our sovereign fleet, and in reliance on this promise of international amity we have neglected even to keep up our supply of ammunition, for according to Assistant Secretary of War, McNider, and Lieut.-Col. C. Seymour Bullock, addressing the National Association of Manufacturers at Chattanooga, October 23, "unless the manufacturers of this country come to the rescue, the War Department and the Army will stand helpless for from six to nine months should another war come."

Talking "Peace," But—

This is interesting and encouraging. But the danger is recognized in other quarters. The new head of the American Legion, E. E. Spafford, in a Navy Day speech at Bloomington, Indiana, on October 26, referring to the crippling of our navy under Harding, charged that Great Britain started to spread its propaganda that it would be satisfied with a navy as large as that of the United States instead of maintaining its sea supremacy, and he added:

"Since we sunk the greatest and best ships, and England and Japan sunk only tubs, these countries have gone ahead with building programs while we virtually stood still. It is no wonder that Admiral Beatty of England said the affairs of the British Empire were safe in the hands of our Secretary of State," thereby referring to the illustrious Charles Evans Hughes, so acceptable to the friends of England as a candidate for President.

Truly, here is something to ponder and occasion to refurbish the old slogan "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."—The Progressive.

Win Trips to Guild Convention

CHESTER MEYER

JACK NORMAN

As winners of highest state honors for Texas in the $75,000 coach-building competition of the Fisher Body Craftsmen's Guild, Jack Norman and Chester Meyer, of San Antonio, will leave this week for Detroit, where they will attend the second annual convention of the Guild, Aug. 22 to 25 inclusive. Fellow-delegates to the convention will consist of two similar winners from each of the other states, the District of Columbia, and each of the seven Canadian districts of the Guild.

The boys earned the trip by constructing the finest Napoleonic coach models in the state, and their models will be re-judged at Detroit as a basis for presenting the four international awards, each consisting of a four-year university scholarship worth $5,000. Among the guests of honor at the convention will be the leading scientific educators of the United States and Canada, including such men as Dr. R. A. Millikan, of the California Institute of Technology, Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and M. Augustin Frigon, of the University of Montreal. Dan Beard, "Father of the Boy Scouts," and John Stiles, head of the Canadian Boy Scout organization, also will attend and will address the boys.

Nominee Garner Just An "Infant" To His Wife-Secretary-Manager

She Keeps 3 Percolators In Office to Supply Coffee Demand

WASHINGTON, D. C.—If John Nance Garner of Texas is elected Vice President next November it will mean an eight-hour day instead of a ten-hour one for his wife and secretary, Mrs. Ettie R. Garner, but one duty she will not relinquish will be that of brewing a cup of afternoon coffee and fixing a snack for the present Speaker of the House.

This combination of "Cactus Jack" and Mrs. Garner is probably the greatest in official Washington. For 30 years Mrs. Garner has been an old-fashioned wife and a modern, efficient secretary. For the next four years she may be "Second Lady of the Land" but she will occupy the same dual role she has so long held. Society may frown upon her and precedents may be lacking, but the habits she has found so interesting, she is not willing to break.

John Garner may be Speaker or he may become Vice President but to Mrs. Garner he is just an "infant" needing a lot of care. Mrs. Garner must remind him that it is time to eat lunch, that it is time to go home. She must call his tailor to the office to measure him for new clothes and then see that he wears them.

The Garners gave up housekeeping twelve years ago when their son, Tully, was married and returned to Texas. Since then Mrs. Garner has done no cooking for the family. They like simple, wholesome food.

"Like all men," Mrs. Garner explains, "he wants a big juicy steak and lots of fresh vegetables for dinner. His breakfast is the typical American one, bacon and eggs and coffee, lots of it."

Mrs. Garner has a percolator in the Speaker's office in the Capitol. In fact she has three of them. About three o'clock every afternoon, without fail, the odor of fresh coffee spreads through the halls nearby. Mr. Garner does not drink it then but Mrs. Garner years ago began "fixing herself" a cup or two in the middle of the day.

Mrs. Ettie R. Garner with her collection of office coffee pots.

"That cup or two of coffee every afternoon has helped me tremendously," she says.

The Democratic Vice-Presidential nominee likes to boast of the important part his helpmeet has played in his rise to political power. She tries to minimize it. Yet she can't very well. Rising at six o'clock every morning after her own ablutions she draws Mr. Garner's bath and a bit later they breakfast. It is a little over a mile from their hotel to the Capitol. Weather permitting, they walk each day. Mrs. Garner goes through every piece of the mountainous mail which burdens down the Speaker's desk daily. She is ready for that coffee brace in mid-afternoon and for more before retiring never later than 9:30 o'clock unless that rare occurrence happens—the Garners enter into Washington's social whirl.

A $1 Dinner for 4

THIS is the day of the dollar—you go a long way to get one, but a dollar goes a long way, once you get it. The above model dollar dinner combines fresh and canned foods, and, incidentally, canned food prices have not yet advanced, but they no doubt will by the first of the year.

Tested Recipes

Beets with Vinegar Dressing: Heat the contents of one No. 2 can of sliced beets, drain and keep hot. Mix together four tablespoons sugar and one teaspoon cornstarch and add with one tablespoon butter, three tablespoons of vinegar and a few grains of salt to the beet juice. Cook until creamy and pour over the hot beets.

Apple Croustades: Cut four square or oblong blocks of bread, without crusts, and scoop out the centers, making boxes. Brush on all sides with melted butter, and dip in brown sugar (using one-fourth cup of butter and one-half cup of brown sugar in all) coating both inside and outside with the butter and sugar. Fill with apple sauce (use the contents of one 8-ounce can of apple sauce). Top with another piece of bread also dipped in butter and sugar and bake in a hot oven—400 degrees—until brown, or from ten to fifteen minutes. Serve warm with one-half cup of thin cream. This serves four persons. If desired, small molds may be lined with bread dipped in butter and sugar instead of making the croustades.

AMONG THE BUSY BEES

MOORE'S HONEY GINGER SNAPS.

- 1 pint honey
- 1 teaspoon ginger
- 1 teaspoon soda
- 2 eggs
- Dissolve soda in a little water and eggs. Mix all, then work in all the flour possible. Roll very thin and bake in a moderately hot oven. Any flavoring extract can be added, as you may wish.

A subscriber to Beekeepers' Item says that a professor had asked him how many bees it would take to produce 62,500 pounds of honey. Of course this is a fool question because the amount of honey gathered by a colony of bees varies from less than an ounce up to 500 pounds per colony, according to breed, strength of the colony and the abundance of honey yielding bloom. If in an apiary the average production of strong colonies of 75,000 or more bees should be 200 pounds per colony 312 1-2 colonies would bring in your 62,500 pounds. Should the production be but one pound per colony then it would take 62,500 colonies to bring the amount of honey you ask for.

A Vermont beekeeper reports that he gets for his honey 20 cents for an 8-oz. jar, 30 cents for a 1-lb. jar and 60 cents for a 3-lb. jar, $1.00 for a 5-lb. pail and $2.00 for a 10-lb. pail and $3.00 for a 60-lb. can. Here in West Texas we could not sell unless we let ourselves be guided by the sirup and molasses concerns.

Our friends in Louisiana and the other damp and hot Gulf Coast States, where the production of white honey is rare and difficult, still persist in the praising of their black honey, and in cussing out our good white honey. Keep at it, boys; change the taste and eyesight of the consumers, for lamp black and other darkening agents are still sold reasonably cheap.

The recent July floods over our parched West Texas have caused many plants to bloom and prospects are now greatly improved for an early fall honey flow. I hope that the hives will all get heavy with honey so we may be saved the expense of feeding up the colonies for the winter.

Using sugar in our homes is only a habit, says C. L. Anderson of Morris, Illinois. He says changing the habit into using honey instead would be a worthwhile effort. Mr. Morris said he had been donating honey to Old Peoples' Homes and Orphanages with good results.

B. T. Gilman, a veteran Frio County apiarist, is rounding out his 80th year in a San Antonio hospital, treating a severe attack of rheumatism, while his bees in the apiaries have piled up a wonderful crop of honey.

Keeping honey on the table is the advice given in a bee journal. I would ask for a slight change in said advice, as follows: Eat, thou, honey because it is good, and should your supply get low, bring in from the pantry a liberal fresh supply, but do not keep it on the table from one year to another, and send the beeman away with words like—we still have what you sold us last year. For your own good health, eat, thou, honey; it is good.

HONEY GINGERNUTS.

- 1 cup honey
- 1cup butter
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 cup nut meats
- 1 tablespoon ginger
- Mix stiff with flour—usually about four cups. Drop by the teaspoonful on a greased pan, and bake in a moderately hot oven.

The recent floods in Southwest Texas did worlds of damage to Apiaries placed in creek or river valleys. Texas beekeepers are very much prone to place apiaries in the valley and I had been under the impression it was on account of the shade, but often found the bees right in the open sun. Therefore, the only objects of placing bees in such a locality seems to be to get same washed away by a flood, to have a reason to complain against certain acts of God, or the fickleness of the weather.

All my apiaries are on high land and none were flooded; and when there is a breeze my bees get it.

As a result of the hard rains, most apiaries have the hives heavy with honey. Being in midsummer, it was a bad time to make bees require their hives on account of the prevalence of some long wasp-like insect generally called bee-hawk. But should we get a slight honey flow in September, just let us require all our colonies to head off weak colonies and excessive swarming among strong colonies with old queens.

Late fall raised queens will seldom swarm if given plenty storage room, and they generally bring in the heavy honey crop next spring.

Much joy is now manifested by some beemen on account of an ice cream preparation made of milk and honey. The Frosted Milk Corporation in San Antonio owns the patents on said preparation. I hunted through about two square miles of city looking and hunting for milk-frost just because I am a fool honey-specialist, and also a lover of ice cream and ice cold drinks. I finally found the milk-frost, and I have found same very good.

B. E. Hunter of California tells me the history of a certain California beeman who had costly experience in feeding his bees sugar syrup during a period of starvation, but being able to get cheap Cuban honey he fed them without first mixing with 50% water and boiling same for at least 30 minutes. That was too much work. He fed that honey of unknown source, and when spring came had to burn up 170 colonies on account of bee diseases brought in with that Cuban honey. There being some 20,000 pounds of comb honey already on the place that had to be burned too. Yet a week he had to burn 31 more colonies to get rid of said bee diseases which could have been prevented entirely by the feeding of granulated sugar, dissolved in water, to the consistency of syrup, or by the thorough boiling of the honey feed—before giving same to the bees.

H. D. Murry of Magnet, Texas, advises requiring every hive after the honey flow. Good idea, provided the honey flora at the time is in good shape, and in consequence your bees are in a mood to accept the queen. If they are not, and you are a beeman who knows his business, has good eyesight, then you will find your "purchased through the mail" queen dead in front of the hive and a bunch of queen cells inside the hive built upon young brood of former queen-mother.

Perhaps the beeman has some 100 colonies of bees. Even if you buy dirt cheap queens at 25 cents each, you have to fork over $25.00. But you actually sell $25.00 of honey from those 100 colonies? I did not per 100 colony. So if I get a honey flow in September, then I kill the old queens, if there are drones in the apiary, and let the bees raise queens from brood in the hive. Over 75¢ will do that anyway, and you can use your $25.00 to pay taxes, the preacher, or some other debts, or buy a new dress for your wife in case you are blessed with one. Do not worry! You will make plenty of honey, anyway, even more than you can use or give away. Forget about selling it; I tried that hard since January 1930, and I could not sell much.

FARM SIRUP MAKING ENCOURAGED.

By W. H. Darrow.

"Texas farmers make 'sorgo sirup' and not 'sorghum molasses,' farm sirup makers in scattered counties in East, West and South Texas were recently told by C. F. Walton, of the United States Bureau of Chemistry and Soils on a trip to the State for the purpose of aiding county agents in a program of extending and improving farm sirup making. "Molasses is a by-product of sugar making, whereas sorgo sirup contains all the plant's sugars," he said.

"The manufacture of sorgo sirup in the United States equals that of cane sirup. Sorgo is more widely grown than sugar cane or sugar beets, gives large returns to the acre, is easy to cultivate, and contains enough sugar to afford a big yield of sirup, usually at a satisfactory profit. The greatest cleanliness and care are required to produce fine sirup. Farmers will do better to offer their surplus sirup to the public in smaller containers attractively labeled. There is need of working out standard grades and of teaching the public to discriminate between good and bad sirup," Mr. Walton said.

In the sorgo sirup schools held, discussions and demonstrations centered on varieties of desirable sorgo cane, soils, fertilizers, culture, equipment, evaporating, canning, prevention of crystallization, and taste preferences. County agents are working to extend farm sirup making for home use by encouraging established sirup makers to work on a shares basis, and helping sirup makers in new areas. They are also aiding makers in standardizing their product for sale.

A HAPPY ISLAND STORY.

By P. A. Spain, Paris, Texas.

You will be interested in the following story from the Dearborn Independent and it will help you to understand many features of the money question. Gladstone once said the surest way to get into an insane asylum, is to study the money question. When you ask many people to talk on finance, they hold up their hands in horror and exclaim, "Too deep for me!"

The first step in getting relief from our present financial bondage is to make the people understand the first elements of exchange and taxation. The following island story will help in this direction:

There is an island in the English Channel which became interested in the building of a market house for its people soon after the close of the Napoleon wars. The object of the market house was to provide shelter for the farmers, and a convenience for the citizens on market days.

At that time the problem was as usual, to get the money; for during the wars the island had been drained of all its coin so there was none to circulate. In other words there had been a "contraction" of the currency, just as now in this country since the World War.

So the people of the island met and discussed their problems and decided to send a committee to their governor, and ask him if he could borrow some money from the City of Paris or London. The governor thought he could do that, but he said "You will have to pay interest on such money", and of course they expected to do that.

But said the governor, "do you realize that after you build the market you will wish to do other things; build a sea wall around your island port and repair your impassable roads, and many other projects that will necessitate more loans, and this will mean a continuous increase in your debt, with additional interest payments from which you will perhaps never be able to free yourselves?"

"Yes", they said, "but is there any other way?" "Before answering your questions, let me ask you some questions:"

"Have you any granite for a foundation? Have you any brick for the building? Have you any lumber for finishing your market?" "Yes", they said. "We either have, or can make all these things." "All right," said the governor. "Have you masons, brick-layers and carpenters to do the work?" "Yes, your Excellency. Why do you ask these questions? You know that we have all these things, and that starting with public work would be a godsend to our idle workmen."

"Yes", the governor said, "but I merely wanted to impress upon you the fact that you have all that is needful to build a market house." Yes, they agreed, all except the money. "Exactly so", said the governor. "Now suppose that we print the money." "Can that be done?" asked the citizens in astonishment. He answered, "Yes, if you would be willing to try."

"But," they said, "would there be no danger of an over issue, and a consequent 'depreciation' of the currency?" "No", said the governor. "We will make a careful estimate and just issue enough to meet our demands. Then we will levy a tax in the same amount to be paid in a convenient period of time. By the payment of this tax, the money will be returned to its source of issue, and having done its work it may then be destroyed."

The idea of the destruction of the retired currency seemed to be a satisfactory safeguard against inflation, and the committee requested the governor to proceed. The money was printed, the work on the market house was started, and payment made for material, labor and supervision, and the market was built. The money circulated from the quarry owner and the brick-maker to the laborers, and the workmen engaged in the building, and from them it passed to the grocer, butcher, baker, tailor and dry goods merchant, all of whom paid their share of this money to the government in the form of taxes.

In the course of time when the market-house money-issue was returned to the treasury, the governor proclaimed a holiday to burn the money for agreement with the committee. The people assembled, the governor made a speech and told of the plan to finance the erection of the market house, and explained the various services which this paper money had performed. Then a fire was kindled and after sprinkling incense on the money, the governor consigned it to the flames.

When the charred flakes had curled and rolled away, the governor asked: "Well, citizens, what do you wish to do next?" They answered, "Tear down the old houses along Main Street and rebuild them." Said the governor: "Too bad that we burnt the money. We could have used it again, could we not?" "That's so," consented the citizens. "Well," said the governor, "it is all right anyway. We can print another issue. The loss after all is only the cost of the paper and printing. I merely wanted to demonstrate that there is no danger of an over-issue if honestly done for honest purposes."

And so issue after issue was made of this paper money without one bit of gold or silver reserve behind it. They rebuilt Main Street, erected their sea walls, built a fine harbor and extensive network of splendid roads, and performed other work of necessity and beauty.

For a hundred years this paper money has continued to circulate without a metallic basis, and yet it has performed all the functions which human need and progress require of it. Those island people are perfectly satisfied with their money and their island today is a model of beauty and convenience.

A traveler recently visited the island from this country with the object of observing the general conditions prevailing on the island, and thereby determine the effect of their money system. Their streets were clean and in good condition, their houses in repair and painted. The store windows were scrupulously clean, fronts painted, and in some instances grained and varnished.

They had built a combined hospital and home for the aged and infirm, which was surrounded by a most beautiful park in the city. There was apparently no poverty, no vulgar show of wealth. The market house is still in operation, the road system of the island is ample and in excellent condition.

Mellowed 80 million years! Such is the history of the Cambro-Ordovician crude oil of Oklahoma which Sinclair refines and blends into Sinclair Opaline Motor Oil—a crude which was already ages old when dinosaurs fought above its hidden reservoirs. Opaline's superior lubricating quality owes much to Nature's age-long treatment, for Nature has filtered it free of impurities, reduced its carbon-forming content, and enhanced its lubricating quality. In process of refining Sinclair adds the crowning touch by de-waxing Opaline and freeing it from non-lubricating petroleum jelly at as low as 60° F. below zero. INSECT ENEMIES—BOLL WEEVIL.

By H. S. Mobley

Agricultural Extension Department International Harvester Company.

The boll weevil is the most destructive insect enemy of the cotton plant. In 1892 it crossed the Rio Grande from Mexico near Brownsville, Texas. During the years since then its invasion of the United States has been practically unchecked, until now it covers almost the entire area of cotton production, only about 115,000 square miles being free of the pest at the close of 1929.

The boll weevil is a decided menace to the prosperity and welfare of America. It presents a problem that must be met with patience, perseverance and co-operation.

While the onward march of the pest has not been stopped we have learned by experience how to fight it and if we will all work together, and all act intelligently, there seems little reason to doubt that eventually we can almost, if not entirely, eradicate it.

When the right methods are used, cotton production under weevil conditions becomes almost normal.

The best methods of fighting the weevil are as follows:

1. Pick the cotton as early in the fall as possible and immediately chop the stalks and turn them under. Not only will this return humus to the soil but it will deprive the weevil of its food and force it into its winter quarters in poor physical condition, making it unlikely that it will survive the winter.

2. Select good seed of early maturing varieties. Let your local farm adviser or your agriculture college advise you as to the best variety for your locality. The earlier we pick our cotton the earlier we can plow under the stalks and cut off the food supply of the weevil.

3. Plant as early as the soil is warm on well drained land.

4. Begin cultivating early and cultivate frequently until picking time.

5. Hunt for and destroy the weevils as soon as they appear on the young plants. When the squares begin falling to the ground be careful to have them all picked up and burned. This will destroy many of the pests and prevent their spreading to other parts of the field.

These methods of fighting the boll weevil have made it possible to save one of the greatest of American crops from total destruction.

Early attempts to poison the weevil were far from successful but in 1918 the Dittla laboratory at Tallulah, Louisiana, conducted experiments on 35,000 acres of cotton, using calcium arsenate in the form of a poison dust spray.

The results were considered satisfactory and were made public. Last year many cotton growers tried the plan with such success that it is more or less generally believed that this method for combating the boll weevil will spread rapidly.

But the use of a poison spray calls for properly devised machinery; it involves many details. For these reasons it is advisable that those who desire to use the method should secure full information from the laboratory at Tallulah.

The weevil eats nothing but cotton and goes into winter quarters close to the field, hiding in old stumps, piles of trash or wherever it can find protection.

Only a small per cent survive the winter; very few that go into winter quarters poorly fed live till spring.

Those that do survive, feed on the buds of the plants from the time the squares are formed. When the weevil first appears in the spring, it is very weak and is easily picked off the plants. This work is usually done by children but a thorough job will pay big returns.

BRIDE-ELECT HONORED.

Miss Marie Koch was honored with a miscellaneous shower on Sunday afternoon, Sept. 18, at the Parish Hall. A color scheme of yellow and white was carried out in floral decorations, yellow and white dahlia compoand a bouquet for the center table. The bride-elect, dressed in wine colored crepe with black accessories, entered with little Anna Mae Carle and Edward Koch. Miss Koch was showered with many beautiful and useful gifts.

A delightful lunch of chicken sandwiches, potato chips, Egyptian cake and iced tea was served to about one hundred and thirty guests.

The hostesses were Mesdames R. A. Carle, Herman Koch and Leonard Robinson and Misses Ethel Bendele and Cornelia Koch, assisted by Misses Lucille and Sara Mae Robinson, Thelma Bendele and Irene Carle.

BENDELE-KOCH.

Holy Cross Church was the scene of a pretty wedding on Tuesday morning, September 28, when Miss Marie Koch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Koch, became the bride of Mr. Paul Bendele, son of Mr. and Mrs. Armin Bendele, Sr., of Dunlay. Very Rev. Dean F. Maas officiated. Several large ferns and floor baskets containing Regina Corona lined the aisle on either side and were also used in the sanctuary. While the wedding march from "Lohengrin" was being played by Miss Josie Rothe at the pipe organ, the bridal party entered in the following order: Miss Cornelia Koch, in orchid crepe, with Mr. Elmer Bendele; Miss Lucille Robinson, in pink crepe, with Mr. Joe Mueller; Miss Irene Carle, in green crepe, with Mr. Walter Bendele; the maid of honor, Miss Ethel Bendele, in blue mouseline de soie; little Miss Anna Mae Carle, flower girl, in a dainty pink ruffled frock, and Master Hilmer Bendele, ring bearer, in white. The bride, gowned in white crepe with tulle veil fitted to a lace cap and finished on either side with a small cluster of orange blossoms, entered with her father, and was met at the sanctuary by the groom and his best man, Mr. Guenther Koch. The bride's attendants wore ankle-length dresses, black hats and slippers, and carried arm bouquets of pink corona regina and fern. The bride's bouquet was in a shower effect of white roses, white regina corona and fern.

The choir, of which the bride had been a member, sang a beautiful Mass by Dobbeltstein and at the Offertory Miss Sarah Rothe sang the "Ave Maria" by Gounod.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents for immediate relatives and a few other friends.

Early in the afternoon the newly wedded couple left for San Antonio. The bride wore an ensemble of tan wool crepe.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bendele will occupy their new home near Dunlay.

BRIDGE CLUB.

Entertaining the members of her club and several guests Miss Grace Zinsmeyer was hostess at bridge on Wednesday afternoon of last week. Miss Cornelia Koch received high score prize among the members and Mrs. Henry Muennink among the guests. Mrs. John Rieber was awarded low score prize and Mrs. Joe Williams received the cut prize.

A dainty lunch of frozen fruit salad, olive nut sandwiches, lady fingers and iced tea was served to the following guests: Mrs. Will Nehr, Mrs. W. E. Albrecht, Mrs. M. A. Zinsmeyer, and Mrs. Henry Muennink and Miss Lucy Rothe. The members present were: Mesdames Herman Ney, John Zinsmeyer, E. A. Rothe, Henry Nehr, Ed. Finger, Henry Birg, John Rieber, Joe Williams and Ferd Rock, and Misses Tina Rothe and Cornelia Koch.

One of the most risky gambles in farming is the feeding of live stock for the market, especially for the inexperienced. Now comes the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and proposes to add to its uncertainties by proposing to lend the taxpayers' money to borrowers to experiment with it and add to the competition in this already precarious game. How much better if the government would devise means for getting people out of debt rather than getting them further in!

"There can be at this time no greater public service than leadership in arousing public opinion in favor of constructive economy in government."—Calvin Coolidge.
